Knox Community Concert Series Has Don Cossacks For An Impressive Start

(By Nettie Bird Frost)

Thursday night the Gen. Platoff Don Cossack Chorus under the direction of Nicholas Kostukoff brilliantly opened the Knox Community Concert Series. A near capacity audience in the Community Building was thrilled by the delicacy, balance and precision of the excellent program.

Every member of the chorus has been personally trained by Mr. Kostukoff, and the men excel as supreme vocalists, capable of producing the most stunning massed tone, either when roaring forth in booming sonority or when uttering whispered phrases of heavenly beauty. Their variation of tone was remarkable, resembling at times the mighty tones of a great organ, and again so soft that it seemed the audience sat with bated breath to catch every note.

Clad in their shiny regimentals of black and red, their blouses of red or white, interchangeable for the different sections of the program, their black glistening boots, their caps at a saucy angle, they made a bright spot of color on the concert stage.

The program presented was as follows:

Part I
Of Thy Mystical Supper, Lvor arranged by M. Fivelsky
The Day of Judgment, A. Archangel
The Rosary, Eberhart Nevin arranged by A. Gretchenhoff
The Lord's Prayer, Ivanoff
Soloist: M. Dedovitch, Tenor
Save Thy People, O God, P. Telesnakoff
Soloists: V. Andronoff, Bass; A. Grigorieff, Bass

Part II
Longing For Home, Vorobkevitch
Vocalise, Rachmaninoff
Song of the Flea, Mousorovsky
Soloist: V. Tehechoff, Bass

Nightingale, Soloist: M. Dedovitch, Tenor
Song of the Plains, Knipper
In 1899, Soloist: V. Fedchenko
Lezginka, Soloist: V. Fedchenko
Caucasian Cossack Dance, Dancer: G. Soloduhin

Part III
From Border Unto Border, I. Djerkinsky
Dance Song, Popular Melody
Russian Serenade, Arr. by A. Salama
Soloist: V. Mamanoff, Tenor
Russian Soldiers' Song, Military Song
Kozatchok, Popular dance of the Don Cossacks

At the end of part one as an encore the Don Cossacks sang "Those Evening Bells." In part 2 the Cossack War song was applauded so enthusiastically that it was repeated and in part 3 the Laughing Polka was sung as an encore, and upon the tremendous applause was repeated.

Every number was characteristic of Russian life and was of much interest—whether a tender folk song, a religious song, of the riotous shouts and whistling of the Cossack war song. Every voice was a highly trained one, and several fine solos showed to advantage as the various solo parts were carried to the accompaniment of the great chorus. The Russian Serenade, with solo by V. Mamanoff was one of the loveliest numbers and the Lezginka, the sword dance, with G. Soloduhin, soloist, was the outstanding feature of the typically Russian dances.

Milford Payson of Camden, was chairman of the concert arrangements and had as assistants Clifford Burkett and Lyford Ames as stage managers, and Clifford Burkett Jr., ticket examiner. Following were ushers: From Camden High School, Maxine Duffell, Betty Kelley, Joan Greenlaw, Eleanor Brown, Janet Foster, Shirley Cookson, Joan

New Honors For Him

Fred L. Andrews, Former Thomaston, Now President Of Denver Concert

From the Oct. 19 issue of the Denver Post comes this item:

"Fred L. Andrews was elected president of Davis Brothers, Incorporated, at a meeting of the board of directors Oct. 18, called to fill vacancies on the board caused by the recent deaths of Roblin H. Davis, president and Richard W. (Bob) White, sales manager. Andrews, in addition to being president, will continue as treasurer and general manager. October 18 marked the 45th anniversary of his continuous service to the firm."

Mr. Andrews, a former Thomaston boy, keeps in touch with his town and Rockland friends through the pages of The Courier-Gazette which he enjoys very much. Among those he has had the pleasure of entertaining are Mrs. Robert Libby and Joel Miller of Thomaston, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hellier of Rockland, and Mrs. John Creighton and daughter, Clare, who now reside in Denver. He writes that they are both well and seem happy in the west.

Connelly and Betty Stetson, and from Rockland High School, Arleen Cross, Beverly Brewer, Joan Young, Anna Bullard, Sydney Rasche, Irene Anderson Flora Huston, Helen Paul, Joan Hunt and Constance Nichols.

The committee in charge feels that a wonderful beginning has been made by the Don Cossacks toward the Knox Community Concert Association series and the other concerts planned will bring added honors to Rockland and the community.

All members of the Association are privileged to attend any of the following concerts in the State: Rockland: Appleton & Field, 2 p.m., Jan. 18; Charles Kullman and Mona Paul, vocalists, May 10. Bangor: Jean Watson, contralto, Oct. 31; The Gaudians, 'cello and piano duo, Nov. 16; Indianapolis Symphony, Jan. 14 or 15; Robert Casadesus, pianist, March 4.

Rev. Robert Cummins, S.T.D.

Rev. Robert Cummins, S.T.D. of Boston, general superintendent of the Universalist Church of America, is to pay a visit to Rockland Wednesday night, Nov. 7. The men of the local Universalist Church will entertain the distinguished denominational official at a lobster stew supper in the vestry.

Dr. Cummins is one of the outstanding churchmen of his day. He is in constant demand as a speaker before colleges and universities in all parts of the nation. His appearance before the men of the Universalist Church in Rockland will be an event of major importance.

Dr. Cummins is a native of Ohio. He received his A.B. and D.D. degrees from Miami University. He has studied subsequently at several American universities and at Oxford, England.

In his early years he served as the Director of the Boon-It Memorial Institute for young men in Bangkok, Siam. He was ordained to the ministry of the Universalist Church in 1926 while the present pastor of our Rockland Church, Dr. Lowe, was serving in the office now held by Dr. Cummins.

In 1938 Dr. Cummins was elected to his present office, the highest in the gift of his church. From the first he served with distinction and today he ranks with the great religious leaders of the nation.

Universalist men of Rockland will be eager to hear him.

The War Chest Drive

The Knox County War Chest is continuing to gain, with contributions still coming in to the towns which have not yet reached their quotas. Campaign Chairman Percy R. Keller reports.

In Friendship, Mrs. Adella B. Jameson of the Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars has been appointed War Chest Chairman for this community, and plans are being made for solicitation this week. In last week's round-up of War Chest news, no contributions were reported in Friendship.

Camden went over the top of their quota of $3,600 last week, and Rockport is still standing in second place with only $73 more to raise to reach its $1,000 quota.

Four Thousand There

Navy Day At the Rockland Coast Guard Base A Complete Success

Rockland and other Knox County people accepted the invitation of the Navy to celebrate Navy Day with them and to inspect the ships sent to Rockland for that purpose, to the extent that nearly 4000 persons passed through the gates of the Coast Guard Base Saturday and Sunday.

The LST 515 and the PCc 1392 provided guides for visitors who explained the operation of the ship's equipment and escorted their charges to every part of the ship. Proud of their ships, the officers and men did every thing possible to entertain their guests.

Youngsters had a real holiday aboard and were allowed free run of the ships. The guns attracted the small fry and the anti-aircraft guns were sweeping the skies most of the day, with the youngsters in the gunners seats.

The size of the Coast Guard Base and its facilities amazed the majority of the visitors. This was the first occasion permitting the entrance of civilians to the base and they were well pleased with what they saw and courtesies extended them by Lieut. Commander Hammond and his staff.

The several Coast Guard ships lying in at the base came in for their share of attention, especially the Argo, which had a large part in the sub surrenders off the coast just a few months ago. Rocklanders met for the first time the cutter Snofish which has replaced the Kickapoo as utility craft and ice breaker in Penobscot Bay waters.

The Navy Day ball at the Community Building, sponsored by the Junior and Senior Hostesses and directed by Chaplain Rasche of the Coast Guard Base drew a large attendance from military units in this area. Harold Bates and his orchestra played in place of the Brunswick Naval Air Station unit which disbanded unexpectedly last Thursday. Refreshments were provided by the hostesses and the Coast Guard commissary.

Big Lobster Pound

Property On Spruce Head Island Bought By Rockland and Lewiston Men

Looking to an early resumption of his pre-war lobster business in this area and in the Auburn-Lewiston section, Carl Simmons of Rockland and his partner, Charles Levesque of Lewiston, yesterday bought land on Spruce Head Island for a wholesale lobster pound.

The purchase was made from Mrs. Ethel M. Sheldon of Spruce Head and includes five Summer cottages now on the land, known as Sheldon's Point. Construction will be started immediately on the pound, which will have a capacity of 75,000 pounds.

Heard Three Cases

Justice Murray of Bangor Presided—Receiver Named—Writs Of Error

Justice Murray, of Bangor, had three hearings at the Court House yesterday.

In the bill in equity of Hedley V. Tweedie vs. Knox Academy of Sciences and Arts, a preliminary hearing was held and Dr. Millard B. Long of Camden, was appointed receiver of said Academy. C. S. Roberts was counsel for plaintiff, and Abraham Brietbard, Deputy Attorney General, for the State of Maine, and Alan L. Bird for Dr. Tuttle of Union.

Also two writs of error were heard. Roy McCutcheon of Bangor, sentenced to State Prison two years for adultery, from Kennebec County in February this year, the sentence was declared erroneous and was re-that the Industry group, headed by Henry Marsh, had raised their figures to $1,105.99. (last week's report was $875.99).

Victory Loan Forces Mount Closing Attack Against War Deficit

"Mine eyes have seen the glory"

Knox County's men and women are today hard at work on the great Victory Loan Campaign, the last of the war time drives by the Treasury Department. The county is in the past is divided into three districts with Rockland headed by Joseph W. Robinson of the First National Bank of Rockland. Camden is under the capable guidance of Charles C. Wood and the Thomaston District will be in charge of Frank D. Elliot, as in the successful past.

These men have proven their leadership in previous drives, working closely with Leon Dodge of Damariscotta, veteran general chairman for the Knox-Lincoln District. The same groups which have worked so efficiently in preceding drives are together again in this, the final effort, determined that it shall go over the top with the same fine spirit as its predecessors.

Child Suffocated

Yvonne Hutchins Meets a Tragic Death When Stonington House Burns

Yvonne Hutchins, nine-year-old daughter of Mrs. Harriet Hutchins, a teacher in the Stonington grammar school, perished Saturday night in a fire which swept the story-and-a-half home of Mrs. Lillian Eaton, better known as Eaton's Inn. The girl was trapped on the second floor of the frame dwelling and her body was found after the flames had been extinguished. Dr. Arnold B. Brown said the child died of suffocation. She was badly burned.

Yvonne had been left in care of the elderly Mrs. Eaton while her mother went to the State Teachers' Convention. The fire broke out about 8 o'clock around an oil heater in the front hall of the Eaton home and spread rapidly up the front stairway.

Mrs. Eaton had to flee for her life from the ground floor of the dwelling and although neighbors put up ladders in an attempt to rescue the little Hutchins girl, they were unable to enter the building because of the dense smoke.

The interior of the Eaton home was gutted by the fire. Yvonne's body was found on the floor of her second-floor bedroom just inside the door which was open and it was believed the child ran to the top of the stairs when she heard Mrs. Eaton cry out in alarm.

Chief Motor Machinists Mate Osgood A. Gilbert, 85 Pleasant street, alderman from Ward five in 1942, until his resignation enforced by his duties in the navy, announced yesterday that he will be a candidate for the City Council in the coming elections. He is the first veteran of World War 2 to enter the race for the Council which will administer the new City Manager form of government.

Gilbert is a veteran of three and one-half years of Naval Service, having enlisted early in 1942 as a motor machinist mate second class. His duty has consisted of assignments to offshore Patrol Craft on the Atlantic Seaboard, duty in California and the Philippine sea frontier with headquarters at Tacloban, Leyte and Manila.

On leave from Chelsea Naval Hospital at Boston, Gilbert announced his intentions and stated that he would be in Rockland and take an active part in his campaign for election within two weeks.

Rockland Teachers

Programs Have Been Slated For the Fine Coming Meetings

The general program committee of the Rockland Teachers' Association announces the following program schedule for 1945-46:

Nov. 8—Public Relations, Supt. Robert Lunt, chairman.
Jan. 17—Teacher Welfare, Principal Joseph E. Blaisdell, chairman.
March 7—A Special program to be arranged by a special committee.

April 4—Legislature, Raymond Bowden chairman.
May 23—Banquet and annual business meeting.

A Salvation Appeal

Abildgaard Who Conducts It In Thomaston, Is Known as the "Durable Dane"

At the request of Chairman E. T. Dornan, of The Salvation Army annual appeal for funds, which is now in progress, Niels T. Abildgaard commenced a systematic solicitation of funds in Thomaston and District yesterday.

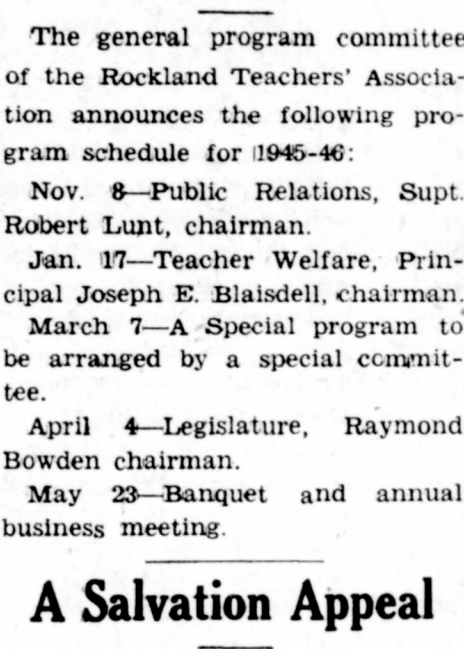

Representative Abildgaard, affectionately known in Salvation Army circles as the "Durable Dane" because of his consistency in all assignments given to him, was born, as might easily be intimated from his unusual appellation, in Denmark. His career, prior to becoming a Salvation Army representative, reads like a page of Horatio Alger. He sailed the seven seas, was saved from death by a freak of good fortune while crossing Death Valley on foot and worked his way through every State in the Union as an entertainer at benefits and parties.

Mr. Abildgaard joined The Salvation Army in 1934, is married and has three children.

The Citizens who have not made their returns by mail to The Treasurer Harold F. Dana, are urged to do so in order that time and expenses may be saved and thereby the greater good be accomplished by the money saved.

The Black Cat

Listeners to the early news broadcasts on WEEI yesterday morning were delighted to hear the voice of Howell Cullinan, who is back from the wars to resume his former post as newscaster for the Boston Herald-Traveler. "Cully" who has always been a great favorite with Knox County radio fans, earned the rank of Lieutenant Commander during the late war. He is frankly pleased to be back in the broadcasting job, and I hope he will not forget his promise to revisit some of his old Maine friends.

Speaking of 13, Amy Stebbins of Friendship, who is employed in the Bath Iron Works, seems to have quite a record. She went to work in the yard two years ago Oct. 13, in Department 13, she got her raise on Friday the 13th, was transferred to another department on the 13th, and now has a room at 713 Washington street and has been going home week ends with a woman who was born on the 13th and married on the 13th. Gosh!

When I see graceful horseback riders I wonder if they haven't a little something on bicycle riders, especially the "humpers."

The boys who have been in the service the past three or four years appear mighty glad to be back home, but not more so than we are to see them.

Faith in the First Baptist Church falters when we see its weathervane pointing northeast while Uncle Sam's reliable vane on the Federal building is steadfastly aiming into the southwest.

Query: Where was Church street in Rockland? The city directory (the latest one, at least,) carries no mention of it.

A white front with blue blinds made its appearance on Main street Saturday and I must say it looks real spiffy. Stand in front of The Courier-Gazette office, look due west, and you will see it. Another marked improvement at the Brook is the newly painted Salvation Army building. I never did like that coal-shed color which ornamented (-) it before.

One year ago: Rev. C. A. Marsteller of the Littlefield Memorial Church accepted a call to the Essex Street Baptist Church in Bangor—Rockland High was beaten 37 to 7 by Winslow High—Donald G. Foley—Among the deaths: Portland, Mrs. Freeman Hamilton of Rockland, 84; Waldoboro, Howard A. Benner, 64; Rockland, Mrs. Bion W. Russell, 92; Camden, Mrs. Carl B. Book Review

K. A. P.

"History of World War II," author, Francis Trevelyn Miller. Published by the John C. Winston Co., in Philadelphia.

This book of nearly 1000 pages is so comprehensive in its noble heights, in setting before the waiting world the needed narrative story of this second world war.

It is a monumental work on which the author has been working more than four years, with over 200 photographs, many of them never before released. This adds to the meat and history needed for visual discernment.

Dr. Miller is author of a number of historical books of importance, but this is his triumph in all the excellent literary and classic combinations he has put into the hands of astute readers for clear and perfect knowledge needed in historical data. A great book in size and content, worthy and true.

Kathleen S. Fuller.

"Pastimes For the Patient," author Marguerite Isks. Published by A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

In the hospitals of our nation are found hundreds of her young service men, handicapped because time is too slow for them in the healing through medical treatment; also physical recovery.

This author has gathered numbers of expedients, which have been tried and found effective for convalescent men to take up time and mind, also teaching ways for future activity and helpful enjoyment while at work on worthy crafts.

The title of the book need not be applied literally. It is a book of teachings, entertainment and interest for those who possibly have a hobby which needs directing. There are 19 chapters, each describing a craft to give work for the ones who need, in their hearts, the creative work found in this delightful book, with full and easy understood directions.

A timely work, where its thoughtful help will be a boon to our men who have paid a price dearly for their patriotic work.

A Tough Customer

Rockland High Was Played Off Its Feet In Saturday's Game

(By Leo R. Connellan)

On a windswept field, at Winslow Saturday, Rockland High's eleven was beaten by a score of 48-0.

Winslow High, which recently proved its worth by holding Waterville to a touchdown, demonstrated complete superiority, over Rockland's less experienced team, by consistently plunging for long gains through its line, and around its ends.

Using a Notre Dame shift, Winslow turned its backs Derosby and Williams loose, on deceptive off-tackle plays to roll up its many scores.

Coach Ray Willett handicapped by the absence of McEllan who was out because of injuries, seized the opportunity to use most of the players on the squad, with the purpose of building for future seasons.

Many of the Freshmen and Sophomores got into the game and gained much experience against Winslow's brilliant team.

In the few times that Rockland had the ball it was unable to gain with any consistency and fumbles generally put a stop to the Rockland attack.

MAKING JAPS TOE THE LINE

If anybody thinks Gen. MacArthur is too "soft" with the Japs they should keep in touch with the daily progress of events there. They should have read yesterday, for instance, how he has ousted those officials who were corrupting St. Paul's Episcopal University from a Christian institution into an ultra-nationalistic hotbed. With this drastic act MacArthur also demands an accounting in 81 other schools, which were formerly supported by American funds. St. Paul's was established 70 years ago with American financial backing, and the Japanese Government has been ordered to restore Christian curriculum. Gen. MacArthur took this action after receiving the report of Gen. Thorpe who said he found much looting and destruction including the slashing of the marble altar and the background screen, apparently with swords. Stone crosses had been destroyed, oak pews and altar rails were taken from the chapel for use in air raid shelters, and there was evidence some fine woodwork was used for firewood. St. Paul's was changed "overnight" to non-Christian teachings. In an "inexcusable and unjustifiable subversion of such institutions to militaristic and ultra-nationalistic ends."

PERFECTING THE ROBOT PLANE

Peacetime research in Naval aviation, which comprehends a very broad field will be along the line of devising an effective defense against future combat. Figuring strongly in that defense will be the robot air machine which can cut up all sorts of capers overhead with no human pilot aboard to guide it. All summer long experiments with the robot plane were carried on at the Ash Point Naval Air Facilities, and they are understood to have been highly satisfactory. Plans call for experimentation in new types, of piloted aircraft, related aircraft of all types, methods of propulsion, fuels and aerodynamic principles. With improvements in turbo-jet engines now in sight, and with high speed a prime characteristic of a fighter airplane, future Navy fighters will probably be jet-powered, possibly with rocket assistance for short bursts of extremely high speed, the Navy said.

FEATURES MAINE ARTICLES

The Autumn issue of The Pine Cone, published by the Maine Publicity Bureau, is at hand, featuring an article on the economic future of Maine by Senator Brewster; a Fall hunting feature covering every kind of Maine game bird and animal by Gene L. Letourneau of Waterville; a descriptive feature on Aroostook, "The Potato Empire"; an article on some of the outstanding peculiarities of native Maine speech. Other contents include a set of old fashioned Maine Thanksgiving recipes, "Cracker Barrel" humor and anecdotes, a dissertation on the comparative epicurean delights of Casco Bay and Penobscot Bay lobsters and a descriptive feature on the Maine sardine industry by Wayne L. Buxton of the Maine Development Commission. Numerous photos and sketch illustrations also enliven the number.

PROUD OF COAST GUARD

Our news report of Navy Day tells that 4000 persons visited the Coast Guard Base on Tillson wharf Saturday and Sunday, and it is safe to say that 95 percent of them, there for the first time, were amazed at the elaborate plant which Uncle Sam has developed for that useful arm of the service. Also at the highly capable manner in which Lieut. Commander I. L. Hammond and his assistants are handling the daily affairs of the Base.

FEW VETS CONVERT POLICIES

A study just completed by the Family Economics Bureau of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company reveals a startling rate of lapsation on the government insurance policies of discharged servicemen. It shows that only one veteran out of 25 has converted his policy to peace-time requirements, while only one out of four is keeping his alive even on a temporary-term basis. Too much high pressure on draftees when they took out their insurance and not enough salesmanship now to get them to keep it in force seem to be the general explanation for this state of affairs. Many of the veterans interviewed, according to the survey, say they recall only one reason advanced when they were urged to take out the insurance. That was: "We want to make this outfit a hundred per cent. Sign here." Now, at the various separation centers, discharged veterans are receiving insurance counsel which ranges from excellent, in some cases, to almost useless in others. Needless to say, there are many cases where the veteran regarded his insurance as merely a temporary protection against the additional hazards of war, and considers any premiums on it as just so much water over the dam. But it is probable that such cases are vastly outnumbered by those involving carelessness, oversight or simple failure to realize that lapsation means the loss of a stake in a peace-time insurance policy that is frequently very sizable. —Herald Tribune.

POST, NO. 1
Limerock St., Rockland

Vice Commander Newhall, chairman of the membership committee, announces 320 paid members for 1946. If each member would contact a friend, neighbor or fellow worker who has returned from service in the Armed Forces and invite him or her to be a member of the American Legion, do you realize what the result would be? Let's all be a committee of one to go "all out" for membership.

Comrade Kelsey promises a grand good time to all who attend the Armistice ball at the Community Building. This is an opportune occasion to get together with all the returned boys. It will seem like old times. A $25 door prize will be awarded to some lucky ticket holder. If you can't go, buy a ticket anyway. You may be the lucky bond winner.

Indicative of the esteem in which the late Ernie Pyle was held by the World War 2 fighting man four newly formed American Legion Posts, at New Orleans, Albuquerque, Hollywood and Chicago, have been named for him. The Chicago post is comprised entirely of employees of the Chicago Sun and has a potential membership of 250.

Nov. 8 is the date of the Post and Corporation meeting. The matter of adding a name to the Post name will be taken up at that time. A buffet supper will be served.

National legislative director of the Legion, John T. Taylor, has warned the House World War Veterans Committee that new legislation must be enacted this Winter if the veteran's right to return to his old job upon discharge is to continue after next May 15.

Unlike "The Robe" and "Keys of the Kingdom," reviewed by Dr. Lowe when they came out, "Green Dolphin Street" is not a religious novel but it is a story of breath-taking interest. In its pages we find a soul-gripping religious message. To allow extra time for the sermon the order of worship will be altered slightly and the service will begin at 10:40 sharp. The second "Novel Sermon" to be announced later, is one of particular appeal to young people, dealing with Dr. A. J. Cronin's latest book, "The Green Years."

Com. Hodsdon Tells Of Experiences Among Polyne-sians—No Cannibals There

Commander Richard P. Hodsdon, U. S. Navy, of South Thomaston, told an interesting story of his five years' experience in the Pacific Ocean during World War II. Commander Hodsdon is "just out" of service for the second time. He lauded the work of the Navy, saying that "it has done a great deal in this war."

"Organization and planning," Commander Hodsdon said, "have been the watchword of the Navy, and have resulted in the greatest possible assistance in bringing both the European and Pacific wars to successful conclusions."

With the use of a map, he quickly transported the Rotarians some 8000 miles from Rockland, and told of the Polyne-sians, which are of the Caucasian race. He said that the men were of fine physique, and that some of the American boys, who had spent much time in the sun, were of darker complexion. The people are in three classes, royal, chiefs and common.

"These people have had no civil war for more than 100 years, and there are no cannibals in Polyne-sia," Commander Hodsdon informed his hearers. "They are very religious; there are many churches, they are great singers and are extremely fond of dancing," he added.

These people have two kings, one denominated "spiritual" and the other "temporal." Commander Hodsdon said, and then went on to explain the duties of each monarch. He ended his talk by saying, "The climate is delightful and there is an abundance of beautiful flowers and tasty fruits." He was introduced by Horatio C. Cowan, Sr., chairman of the program committee.

It was fitting that Commander Hodsdon speak at this meeting, which fell on the day before Navy Day. Guests of the club, seated at the head table, were Lieut. Commander Harry I. Bartlett, executive officer at the local Coast Guard Base; Lieut. Andrews S. Draper of Champaign, Ill., of the PCS 1392; Lieut. J. H. Doyle of Missoula, Mont., of the LST 515, and Mayor Edward R. Veazie.

There were three guests of members, Howard Butler and Robert Chaney of Augusta, and Staff Sergeant Walter H. Butler, Jr., of Rockland. Visiting Rotarians, bringing the attendance up to 62, were Gilbert Harmon and C. Kendall Hopkins of Camden. Tentative date for the visit of District Governor, Crammond O. Baptist, Trois Rivières, P. Q., Canada, is Nov. 9.

Rubinstein Club

Revels In Another Fine Program, With State President Present

The meeting of the Rubenstein Club with Mrs. Katherine Derry, Masonic street, Friday night was of broadest interest from many angles.

Miss Mabel Spring was in charge of the program, and had the added pleasure as all members did, of listening to a charming talk from the State President, Miss Louise Armstrong, who gave a marvelous account of two national meetings—one at Peterborough, N. H., at the Music Center headed by Mrs. McDowell. Then another attractive and thrilling account of the Atlantic City meeting.

Miss Spring's paper was "History of Early Religious Hymns." As always Miss Spring put much study and research into her vital subjects and thereby gave to the club needed information and help.

The program was augmented by illustrations of hymns everyone loves. The program of music was of high character and enjoyment. Fortunate are we to have this year Mrs. Helen McAllister, wife of an officer, who is generous and full up with musical culture and gifted with a remarkably fine voice; also the new members, Mrs. Maxine Wight and Miss Charlotte Cook.

A guest of the evening was Edmond St. Laurent, a former pupil of Miss Spring's in Fall River, who is just home from overseas duty in Chaplain service, his title is Staff Sergeant. He gave a glimpse into his work and thrilling experience in a modest and charming way. Later he delighted the Club with his music. He is a real artist with pen and brush. We also had our own Bill Brown, guest of Miss Alice Erskine, home from overseas, his title Warrent Officer in the Air Corps.

Mrs. Derry served delightful refreshments of tea and cakes—Miss Armstrong and Mrs. Dora Bird pouring.

The program:
Piano Solo—Firefly. Mrs. Haa Beach
Paper on Hymns. Miss Charlotte Cook
Hymn—Nearer My God To Thee, Sarah F. Adams
Holy Night, Mrs. Ruth Hoch, Mrs. Mary L. Garrett
Accompanist: Mrs. Faith Berry

Back To Civil Life

Emery Francis Barbour, 65, died at his Oak street home last night, following a brief illness. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the Burpee Funeral Home with interment in Achorn cemetery.

Deceased was born in 1879 on Swan's Island, son of George and Vesta Barbour and in 1897 was married to Hattie Joyce, also of Swan's Island. In 1918 the family moved to this city which had since remained his home.

Emery Barbour was a man's sort of man, loyal in friendships, quiet in speech, yet always genial. He was a master in his profession, that of a marine engineer, and his services were always in demand. He served many years with the Vinalhaven & Rockland Steamboat Co., and had a great affection for the steamer Gov. Bodwell. Ill health forced him ashore for a decade where he served as steward for the Elks Club. His last sea duty was engineer of the outside tug Eugene Spofford.

He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. William Koster, three sons, Clinton A., of Rockland, Lawrence K. of Washington, D. C., and Shirley D., U. S. Navy, six grandchildren and a cousin, Miss Maude Staples, especially close to the deceased and the family.

Mrs. Clara M. Calderwood, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Seneca Falls, N. Y., the past three weeks, has returned home.

A drill meeting of the auxiliary to Canton Lafayette will be held at 7:30 tomorrow night, in preparation for inspection Nov. 7. It is important that officers be present.

Sam J. Savitt is in Boston for a few days.

History, Home Life and Personal Recollections

Vinalhaven Net Factory

The Net Business

From good authority I learn that the net business in Vinalhaven had its beginning in 1847 under the management of John Carver in the building known as Wallace House which once stood on the present site of the residence of Ambrose Peterson. These were fish nets and were made for the American

Net and Twine Company of Boston. Some years later Mr. Carver was awarded a contract from L. C. Chase Company of Boston for the making of horse nets.

It is not known just how long this industry remained under the management of the Carver family but Mr. Carver's youngest daughter Josephine had charge of the business prior to her marriage to L. I. Pendleton in the middle 1860's.

During the Civil War the business was carried on in the house now occupied by Frank Thomas on Summer street. The building then faced High street.

The late Mrs. Calvin Vinal once told the writer that she was one of the "factory girls" at that time and on the day the news was received of the ending of the Civil War, the girls were given a half holiday and decorated themselves in the bright colored hosiery and gave a street parade in honor of the war's ending.

This net business also was at one time conducted by Benjamin Lane at the Emery Smith Place, so called at East Boston. Some time later Edgar L. Roberts started a store in the building now occupied by Leo Lane and took over the business for the American Net and Twine Co.

From the "Vinalhaven Wind" of March 1, 1884 I have copied the following:

"Perhaps not the least important branch of industry in this place today is its net knitting.

"At one time, before the application of machinery was introduced into the business, and the granite business was developed here net knitting was one of the chief employments of nearly every inhabitant on the island, and to many it was their only employment and one of the necessities of their existence. Today, however, it does not assume such gigantic dimensions, yet it is almost the sole dependence of many.

"Its present management is under the control of E. L. Roberts, who has conducted it for about 18 years and thoroughly understands the business. Comparatively, the force employed in the business at present, is small to that of former years. Mr. Roberts tells me that his present force—knitting nets of different descriptions—is over 400 and the number of girls employed weaving them together is 17.

"His weekly shipments of horse nets and tips amount to about 1800 in number, making his season's work amount to about 43,000 horse nets and ear tips, besides other knitting of lesser magnitude.

"In the summer season the business is generally at a standstill, resuming early in the Fall again and continuing until late in May."

For a large part of the above data in reference to Vinalhaven's net factory days I am indebted to M. P. Smith, manager of the factory.

When Mr. Roberts took over the business, he started with a spooler, two looms and a small oil engine and the nets were made in but few colors. All the weaving was done by hand.

Edgar Roberts removed to Bar Harbor in 1888 and his brother Edwin was put in charge of the business, a position he held until 1889 when L. C. Chase & Co. of Boston, bought out the American Net & Twine Co. Through this arrangement the Chase Company had the territory of Vinalhaven and Deer Isle, while the American Net & Twine Co. retained the territory of North Haven and Swan's Island.

From that time on E. R. Roberts was superintendent of the local factory until the time of his death in 1914, with H. J. Pring of Boston as manager until the year 1900 when he was succeeded by Mark P. Smith of Boston.

A new net factory building was constructed during the Winter of 1897-8. At about this same time machine-made nets had begun to replace the hand-made ones and looms for this purpose were installed in the new factory building, also stitching machines now began to appear and hand-made nets were discontinued.

During the growth of machine work, David F. Mills was machinist and overseer of the manufacturing department. Mills was later succeeded by Bernard H. Mossman and in turn he was succeeded by Lyford Ross as general superintendent.

Ross held this position until the factory was permanently closed in the year 1926, the business being sold to Western interests and removed to Milwaukee, Wis.

The horse-net business vanished some years ago and yet you'll find a goodly number of citizens (mostly the "women folks") still engaged in knitting, not horse-nets nor "ear tips" as of old, but those we've come to know as basketball nets, pool table pockets, and nets peculiar to the fishing industry such as lobster pot heads, eel nozzles, bait bags and dip nets. The pot heads and bait bags are used by local lobstermen; the others are sold out of town firms who deal in such merchandise and who supply the twine for same. Local representatives of these firms attend to the payment and shipment of the nets.

No story of Vinalhaven's Net Factory days is complete without special mention of the late Mrs. Eliza Brown, generally referred to as "Aunt Lizzy." Loved and highly respected by her host of friends and co-workers she might have been truthfully called the "Queen of the Net Factory." Aunt Lizzy was a familiar figure in other days as seen going to and from her work at the factory with an armful of various colored horse-nets for home work in the evening, bring them home at day's end and returning them all complete, on the morrow—day in and day out—year after year, almost to the day of her death, this was Aunt Lizzy's routine.

Quaint, kind, lovable Aunt Lizzy must surely have qualified to enter through the Golden Gate up yonder when she passed from this earth and if I am ever so fortunate as to even be permitted to peep in through those shining bars and catch a glimpse of old friends on the inside I'm sure I shall discover Aunt Lizzy among them, positively identified through the bright colored horse-net she'll be tussling, for she couldn't be happy, nor Aunt Lizzy, without them.

A FAMOUS AMERICAN PAINTER

Tragic Death of N. C. Wyeth who Had A Summer Home At Port Clyde

Newell C. Wyeth of Chadd's Ford, one of America's most famous painters, and his three-year-old grandson Newell, were killed when the station wagon Mr. Wyeth was driving was struck by a train near Chadd's Ford, Penn. Mr. Wyeth would have been 63 years old on Monday.

The child was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Wyeth, also of near Chadd's Ford.

The double tragedy briefly reported in Tuesday's issue, occupied nearly three columns of space in a Wilmington newspaper and pictures show the terrific effects of the impact, which was sufficient to derail the locomotive.

The following extracts from the Wilmington paper will be of special interest in St. George where Mr. Wyeth had a summer home and was universally liked and esteemed.

Mr. Wyeth was a colorful personality active in the promotion of the Delaware Art Center and the Wilmington Society of the Fine Arts. He was particularly noted for his insistence upon honesty in art and his repeated expressions of the relationship of art and religion.

His paintings—outstanding for their remarkable color—carried on in many ways the tradition of his noted teacher, Howard Pyle, in emphasizing the American theme—historical and legendary. His works were familiar to thousands of school children throughout the nation—paintings that illustrated books on pirates, adventures, the outdoors, and the sea, and the humble people of Maine where he spent his summers. Among his best known illustrations were those for "Robinson Crusoe" which now hang in the children's department of the Wilmington Public Library. One of his murals in Delaware is "Apotheosis of the Family" unveiled in the Wilmington Savings Fund Society in 1932.

Mr. Wyeth is survived by his wife, the former Carolyn Brennehan Bockius of Wilmington whom he married in 1906. The Wyeths and their children and in-laws formed one of the most interesting and dynamic family groups in this part of the country.

His children are: Henriette Hurd, an artist and wife of Peter Hurd, well known young artist, who have two children: Carolyn, an artist; Nathaniel C. Wyeth, engineer; Ann, a composer, whose husband is John McCoy II (they have three children), and Andrew, one of the best known younger artists of the United States.

Born in Needham, Mass., Oct. 22, 1882, he attended briefly the Massachusetts State Normal Art School and Eric Pape's Art School, both in Boston.

Leaving his home in Needham at the age of 16 with only his six feet of muscle as available assets, he went West to become a cowboy. He spent much of his youth as a stage driver and acquired there the spirit of adventure which pervaded his book illustrations.

He once worked in a horse show as stable boy to study the motions of well trained horses, having decided to stay far from the still life school of art.

In the early Twenties he was already famed for his illustrations of such volumes as "Robinson Crusoe," Conan Doyle's "White Company," and "Treasure Island." "I learned about pirates after I grew up," he said.

He attributed the inspiration for one painting to a vivid dream which he was unable to forget until he laid it out on canvas. That was a scene of the Battle of the Brandywine, with Washington directing operations. The dream was one in which Washington seemed to come back to describe the battle to Mr. Wyeth. It resulted in a definite conclusion in Mr. Wyeth's mind as to the first President's character.

Another painting in which Washington was the prominent figure was Wyeth's "Building of the First White House." In that scene, after much research into the building of the White House and Washington's deep interest in it, Mr. Wyeth showed the President conferring with builders on the laying of shingles for the roof. Still another shows Trenton's reception for Washington in 1789.

In 1932 his "Apotheosis of the Family" was completed for the 100th anniversary of the Wilmington Savings Fund Society. That mural, 65 feet by 19 1/2 feet, was treated in a "lyrical" manner, Mr. Wyeth said.

Mr. Wyeth once left his Chadd's Ford home for several years to prepare murals for the federal reserve bank and First National Bank in Boston.

He started to make the latter bank's murals on the history of Boston, but decided the bank's shipping interests made that field too narrow. Accordingly he endeavored to portray the story of ocean commerce in four large paintings.

In the same bank he prepared an illuminated map of North and South America, peopling the remote lands with strange men and beasts, and the seas with prodigious and scaly monsters in the ancient cartographer's tradition. The rollicking figure of old Neptune dominates the map.

Mr. Wyeth's work in the National Cathedral in Washington dates back only a decade. He regarded the mural of Christ as the crowning achievement of his entire career. It was there that he painted for the first time his conception of Christ as a strong man, in contrast to His usual portraits as a frail and humble man.

The central section of the mural, where Christ appears, reflects Mr. Wyeth's years of thought on "what Jesus ought to have looked like." Mr. Wyeth also did much research on his "radical" ideas on using color in the base of the mural, and found the same ideas had been used centuries previously in Europe. He carried out the idea as planned.

His paintings were always popular when shown at the Delaware Art Center and several times his entries were voted the most popular. Among his favorite seascapes were painted at Port Clyde, Maine where he spent his summers.

Mr. Wyeth was noted as far back as 1920 for the many tasks he could keep up at one time. At that time Mr. Wyeth was illustrating for "Miles Standish" and "Westward Ho," and had a landscape at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Arts. Mr. Wyeth won a gold medal at the San Francisco Exposition of 1915, and received the Beck prize of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in 1910. He was a member of the National Academy of Fine Arts and many other organizations.

NIGHT THOUGHTS

Might I not, me with force— A blow which swayed my heart; I stood in the smudge of space And watched for stars to impart Their life to my withered smart— As they shone in beauty's mart. Then came out of the East The glow of moonbeams light, I caught the edge of increase, As light filled me with sunrise, And new fires awoke in my mind All kindled with love that is kind. Kathleen S. Look them over... four good tires with thousands of miles of use left in them. But they're no good to him now.

His car is ready to join the scrap pile of 4,500,000 other cars removed from active service since Pearl Harbor. It is one of the 3,000 that go off the road every day for lack of proper attention and service.

Take a lesson from his predicament, and give your car the care it needs to see you through. For even after new car production gets under way, it will be a long time before supply catches up with demand.

Keep your car serving you to serve America. Let us inspect and service it—regularly.

MIGNAULT-COGAN

Miss Beverly J. Cogan and Kenneth L. Mignault, SLC, USNR were married at a quiet double ring ceremony performed by Rev. H. F. Leach at the Federated Church parsonage in Thomaston, Friday afternoon.

The bride was dressed in a street length gown of light rose crepe and wore a veiled hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was of white gardenias.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Gregory and Mrs. Louise J. Rogers, aunt of the bride. Miss Cogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Cogan of Warren, was graduated from Rockland High School with the class of 1944 and last July completed a course of study at the Western Union School in Washington, New Jersey and has since been employed by the company in Bath, Maine and Whittinsville, Mass.

Sic Mignault is a son of Mrs. W. W. Gregory and graduated from Rockland High School in 1944. He has been in the service since July, 1944, the greater part of the time in the Pacific theatre.

The couple left for a wedding journey of unrevealed destination, following which Mrs. Mignault will continue her duties with Western Union and Sic Mignault will report in Boston for further assignment.

Last Wednesday a Halloween party was held in the Tower Room of the Community Building.

The sponsors were Miss Margaret Dennis, Miss Mary Austin and Miss Gloria Ristano. The chaperon was Miss Eleanor Curtis. The decorations for the party were well arranged. They consisted of various forms of orange and black crepe paper, hung about the room and pumpkins and cardboard skeletons. About 60 attended the party and a good time was enjoyed. "Post office" was played, and dancing was done, to the accompaniment of many old, as well as, new records. Sandwiches, cookies and punch were served.

The lowly sea urchin is becoming a source of important revenue to fishermen along the Maine coast, a market for them having been developed in New York. Mittens protect the fishermen against the rigors of a North Atlantic Winter as well as against the spines of the urchins. Last year some 70,000 pounds were gathered and shipped to New York at an average wharf-side price of a cent a pound. The price sometimes goes up to $1.50 for a 70-pound bushel. This year, with men looking for anything that can be eaten, sea urchins make a good "filler crop" between the seasonal runs of other fish, and it is expected the shipments will hit 200,000 pounds. Right now the business is confined to an area roughly ranging from eastern Casco Bay (Harpwell) to Friendship. This area, however, is bounded by the resourcefulness of the fishermen, and not by the quantity of urchins.

HIGH SCHOOL HIGHLIGHTS

The third annual nation-wide competition for five science scholarships at the University of Rochester, valued at $1,500 each, is announced by the University and the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company. The competition is open to students in nearly 3,000 high schools, including Rockland High, that participate in the Bausch and Lomb Honorary Science Awards, under which medals are presented each year to graduating students with the highest standings in science subjects. Only winners of the Honorary Science Awards are eligible to compete for the scholarships. Rockland High has been participating in this program for several years, and winners for the past three years, according to Mr. Sturtevant, have been Anson Olds, Jason Thurston, and John Brann.

The 3d and 7th periods Biology classes, taught by Mrs. Hart, went on a nature hike to Lindsey Grove, Tuesday. They looked for different types of leaves, seeds, buds, weeds, and trees. They found many pretty Autumn leaves which they are treating with a salt water solution and glycerine to preserve them for Winter decorations.—Nathalie Post.

Vernon Gerrish '32 visited school Friday while on his first leave since joining the Naval Reserves. A former student here, Seamon Gerrish plans, while in the Navy, to study basic engineering. He has now been in service two months.—Leo Connellan.

At the weekly meeting of the Commercial Service Club, Friday, gold pins were selected by the members, which symbolize business by portraying a towering skyscraper. Club pictures, in charge of Ava Wiggins, were also ordered. Work done by the club the past week included the mimeographing of 2000 invitations for the four Parent-Teacher Associations, 400 copies of songs for the Navy Day assembly, 800 pages for the Community Concerts Association, and the typing of items for the Highlite and The Courier-Gazette.—Seth Batty, Secretary.

William Bodman, formerly a Marine, who has seen service in the South Pacific area, has entered Senior High, taking the Latin Scientific course.

The advanced typewriting classes learned how to change typewriter ribbons and also how to put on new ribbons, this week.

At the Little Theatre Workshop meeting, Wednesday, Mr. Smith gave a list of actors who could be studied this year. Paul Payson, Thespian president, gave a talk on Alfred Lunt, and Lucille Mank, Thespian treasurer, spoke on the Greek actor Thespis, for whom the Thespian Society is named. Mr. Smith told how a play should open and close and how it should be judged, using Shakespeare's immortal line, "The play's the thing."—Leo Connellan.

Defense stamps amounting to $81.55 were bought in Senior and Junior High this week, which is 90% of the weekly goal, according to collectors Margaret Steeves and Catherine Young, Seniors.

Navy Day was observed in Senior High at the weekly assembly, Oct. 23, with Chaplain Walter C. Rasche of the Coast Guard Base, as speaker, and Sidney Rasche, his daughter, and a Junior in this school, leading the devotions. The speaker was introduced by Paul Payson who cited the fact that it was a happy occasion for the audience to have this "father-daughter combination" for this annual observance. Chaplain Rasche told of the need for education, and for diligent application to studies while in high school. "The Navy," he said, "is the greatest school in the world," for here the Spars, Waves, and sailors are continually studying, and seek even academic subjects, especially English, not only for the navy but for life. He described the preparation and work of a chaplain, whose purpose it is to bring the message of God to those with whom he works. He believes that in the World of Tomorrow men and women will be interested in the Spirit of God, rather than in the things of the world. Two appropriate songs were sung by the school, with Katherine Stevens and Anna Bullard accompanying at the piano.

This program was presented at the second meeting: singing of "Orleans," led by Irene Andersen; word game directed by Anna Heino in which a paper with a name of an object on it was pinned on the back of the students, who guessed what it was by asking questions in French singing of "The Marseillaise."—Irene Andersen.

Quarterly exams begin Wednesday and continue through Tuesday of next week.

Mrs. William Talbot will be the speaker at Tuesday's assembly, Oct. 30, having for her subject "Picturesque Word Origins."

THANKS, MR. DAY
Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—I was never prouder of The Courier-Gazette than when I read the paragraph in the Black Cat column which said: "Something brand new in local criminology developed in Municipal Court yesterday. The details are omitted because The Courier-Gazette is a family newspaper." Thank heaven, there is, at least, one paper which has some regard for the young of our households. Our daily papers abound in the stuff which certainly is of no benefit to the younger generation. I read that paragraph more than once for it sure was worth it to me. All praise to The Courier-Gazette.

SOME RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS

Bowdoin College in the Gay Nineties

Part One

(By James E. Rhodes, '24.)

For some reason or other the last decade of the Nineteenth Century has come to be known by the appellation of the "Gay Nineties," while the preceding decade is called the "Elegant Eighties." I do not know the reason for either of these designations, and I do not know that they were used during those times.

This designation seems to be retrospective as to both of those decades. I might say, however, that although I remember little of the Eighties, as I read about that decade and see the pictures of the times it impresses me that there was an elegance of dress, manners and deportment then which justifies the designation.

As to the "Gay Nineties," I lived through that decade in the full flush of late youth and early manhood, and I can see that those years did possess a gaiety which justifies the designation, although during that time this country went through an economic depression which was considered as being very severe.

Four boys in my class in High School went to Bowdoin, and so we were there during the middle years of the decade of the "Gay Nineties." Jim Russell and I went in the Fall of 1893, so we were members of the Class of 1897. Russell was a Warren boy who came to Rockland to fit for college in High School. He studied medicine after graduation from college and practiced for some time in South Brewer. He met an accidental death by drowning in 1927, while on a fishing trip.

Billie Spear and Ralph Wiggins came a year later and were members of the Class of 1898. Billie spent all of his life in Rockland, and was a leading business man there until his death a few years ago. While I have always felt that my welcome to Rockland were cordial in the extreme, no more cordial welcome was ever extended to me than by Billie Spear, and I miss very much the pleasant calls that I used to make on him. Ralph Wiggins taught in the Rockland High School after graduation from college, and then was engaged in school work in different Massachusetts towns until World War I, when he was in France with the Foyer du Soldat. For a while we lived together in the same Pension in Paris. For the last 25 years or so he has been back in Rockland, where he impresses me as leading a very useful life.

Besides Russell and myself, another boy who hailed from Rockland was in our class in college, Stephen Osgood Andros. He had not fitted in our school, but was a graduate of Gardiner High School. His father was manager of the Thorndike Hotel and had come to Rockland while Steve was in High School in Gardiner, so he let Steve stay there and graduate. He was one of the most brilliant men in the class. He became a mining engineer. I have lost sight of him for years, but I believe he is dead now.

A few years before I entered Bowdoin a young Congregationalist minister had been called to head the moribund, sleepy and lethargic Bowdoin of 1885. This was William DeWitt Hyde. By 1893 he had made his impression upon Bowdoin, and although then only 35 years old he had come to be regarded as one of the outstanding college presidents in the country. He was destined to be there for 24 years more, a service of 32 years in all. He was a strong combination of scholar and administrator, one who left the imprint of his personality upon everyone with whom he came in contact.

Bowdoin had been incorporated in 1794 largely through the efforts of a body of Congregational ministers, and the Congregationalist influence there was then pretty strong, although this was not apparent in the administration of the College, perhaps not any more so than the Baptist influence in Colby and the Free Baptist influence in Bates. All of the presidents of Bowdoin had been men trained for the Congregationalist ministry. A majority of the faculty were Congregationalists, and the Congregational Church in Brunswick was regarded as the "College Church."

Attendance at daily and Sunday chapel was compulsory, and every student was required, on paper at least, to attend church on Sunday, but attendance at no particular church was required. A record of attendance was taken at the Congregational Church but at no other church, so if a student desired to avoid going to church he simply registered as a member of some other denomination.

The number of Universalists there was surprising. While Tufts was a Universalist college, I doubt if the proportion of Universalists there was as large as the proportion registered at Bowdoin.

The western part of the Bowdoin campus has changed but little in its main features in 50 years, but the eastern portion is not recognizable to one who has not been in the campus in half a century. The northern portion has been beautified during the past few years by the love and generosity of a Rockland boy, a Bowdoin graduate, Walter V. Wentworth, of the Class of 1886, a devoted and hard-working Overseer of the college.

Through these changes in landscaping which he has suggested and financed this portion of the campus has become a beauty spot. In addition to the new buildings and the beautiful gates which have been erected at the different entrances to the campus, by classes and as memorials, have done much to improve these entrances.

For the first century of her existence Bowdoin had neither elaborate buildings nor elaborate equipment, but it had attributes which were much better, a strong faculty and a student body made up in the main of boys who knew what they were in college for and made good use of their opportunities. There were few play boys in college then. The "college dude" of the elegant Eighties was a thing of the past. Disciplinary problems were few, and all discipline was in the hands of the President. There was no Dean, and little in the way of administration such as that with which the college boy, and the college girl, of the present day, is familiar. Bowdoin was the only college in the State which was not co-educational, and it has always remained a men's college.

There were in 1893 less than half of the buildings on and about the campus that Bowdoin has now. Massachusetts Hall, the original college building, housed the Treasurer's Office, the Department of Biology, and a museum of natural history. Maine Hall, Winthrop Hall and Appleton Hall, were the dormitories. Adams Hall housed the Medical School, now discontinued, and the Department of Chemistry. Memorial Hall had two class rooms and a small assembly hall on the first floor, and a much larger assembly hall on the second floor. The library was in the wings of the Chapel.

The Sargent Gymnasium and the Taylor Observatory completed the list of the main buildings. Two more buildings were in process of erection on the western side of the campus, the Walker Art Building, the Searles Science Building, which were completed and dedicated in 1894. To this latter building were removed the Department of Biology, of Chemistry, and of Physics. I do not remember where the Physics Department had been previously located.

Just a few words regarding the faculty. I have already mentioned President Hyde, but as an executive and an administrator. In addition he taught classes in Psychology, Philosophy and Ethics. His classes were largely in the nature of lectures and discussions, and I do not remember that he ever flunked a man on examination. No one ever sat through his classes for a year without receiving benefit which cannot be appraised and coming out with a much broader comprehension of things in general. He was a great liberalizing influence.

My next article will deal particularly with the student life at Bowdoin during this period.

Portrait Unveiled

Honoring the President of Andover-Newton Theological School

At a special meeting of honored guests, faculty, students and friends of Andover-Newton Theological School, there was unveiled an excellent portrait of this school's brilliant and greatly beloved president, Rev. Dr. E. C. Herrick.

This recent event marked the constant progress which has been recognized ever since Dr. Herrick and his greatly beloved wife took over the religious work at this institution. And when one says "work" he means work, for these earnest and deeply Christ-like persons.
